

March 24, 2022

Dear Senator/Rep:

The undersigned organizations representing millions of people strongly urge you to enact emergency supplemental funding to ensure our nation's capacity to protect our people from COVID-19. The Biden Administration's $22.5 billion request is needed immediately to purchase more vaccine doses, treatments, and testing. We are counting on you to carry out your responsibility to secure our preparedness for any new wave of coronavirus disease and to do all we can to prevent more deaths now.

We are still suffering from more than 1,200 daily deaths from COVID-19. Cases are declining, but the U.S. is still averaging over 31,000 per day. Eight months ago, our case declines were even greater, but were followed by the grievous Omicron surge. There are signs of rising caseloads elsewhere in the world, with a new variant in Germany causing the new case average to rise 56% from two weeks before, and cases surging in China. Please do not fail to heed the warning signs and the painful lessons of the past: Congress must provide the funds to maintain and advance prevention and treatment.

The Biden Administration has informed Congress that vaccinations, testing, and treatment for the uninsured will run out of money in early April and it will stop taking new treatment and testing claims on March 22, leaving vulnerable communities, including many people of color and front line workers unable to access needed health care to prevent and treat COVID. We are learning that second booster shots may be needed for older people, but funds will not be available to purchase the additional doses. Monoclonal antibody treatments are in short supply, with state allocations expected to be cut by more than 30 percent in the next week.

There are 7 million moderately or severely immunocompromised people in the U.S. The Administration has planned to purchase preventative treatments for them on March 31, to get the months-long manufacture process underway. Without the supplemental funds, the availability of treatment will be delayed.

The billions of dollars for global vaccine distribution must not be delayed, for humanitarian and self-serving reasons. New variants will continue to emerge with worldwide consequences if we do not act. We must continue and expand our early warning research and surveillance in order to protect against disease.

We have treatments and prevention strategies we did not have months ago. Your swift funding approval is needed to prevent needless deaths and illness. Coronavirus spread continues to be an emergency, and funding offsets should not be required. In the public interest, please do not delay any longer, and approve the Biden Administration's emergency supplemental funding request for COVID-19.

Sincerely,

2Life Communities
